

OECD INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS DIALOGUE 2013

March 4th and 5th 2013

OECD Headquarters

2, rue André Pascal, 75016 Paris

Bringing together government officials and representatives from firms in various sectors and regions, the OECD is holding an International Business Dialogue on 4-5 March 2013 to identify and prioritize barriers to international business activity. In particular, the event aims to provide a platform to companies to share hands-on experience in international markets with representatives of both the OECD and its members' trade ministries – and identify the most urgent obstacles to international commerce before, at, and beyond the border.

As the key source of trade policy analysis and advice for its 34 member countries, the OECD is a unique forum for business to provide direct input in setting the policy agenda. Thus, the International Business Dialogue will afford business the opportunity to interact with policy makers of member countries, as well as major emerging economies. As such, the OECD International Business Dialogue 2013 intends to gather valuable, first-hand insights from the business community with the goal of having an informed policy debate, leading to evidence-based policy making.

The OECD International Business Dialogue program and further information will be available shortly here.
